Neil Tester

Neil's professional focus is on making people's voices heard in health and social care policy and practice. From 2015 to 2019 he worked for Healthwatch England, since when he has been Director of The Richmond Group of Charities, bringing together major health charities to help them make more difference through collaboration. He also understands how the world looks to health professionals, having worked for the Chartered Society of Physiotherapy.

Neil's personal experience of how the health and care systems affect people comes from years of long-distance caring for parents with multiple conditions, as well as his many months of treatment and rehabilitation following an accident.
